Responding to the Coronavirus

With the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) declaring the Coronavirus Disease (COVID-19) an emerging situation in the United States, NSBA is providing information and guidance on the rapidly developing matter. Information and resources — including a guide intended to inform school district leaders about the federally-identified risks associated with this particular virus and to provide a checklist of issues school leaders should be considering as they plan for any such crisis in their community — that can help school districts prepare for a potential case of the virus in their schools and communications can be found on our coronavirus resources page. The webpage will be updated as new details and tools become available.

Hard-to-Count Populations in the 2020 Census

Children not counted in the census can impact a community for at least 10 years until the error is corrected. For school leaders, every child matters, and accurate information supports school districts in strategically planning for funds and resources that are needed to provide every student with high-quality education.
