

Havasupai Tribe allows return of tourism after nearly three years

KNAU News and Talk - Arizona Public Radio | By KNAU STAFF

Published January 24, 2023 at 3:15 PM MST

AP Photo/Bob Daugherty, File

This 1997 file photo shows one of five waterfalls on Havasu Creek as its waters tumble 210 feet on the Havasupai Tribe's reservation.

The Havasupai Tribe will allow visitors to return to the reservation Feb. 1 after nearly three years.

Leaders closed the reservation in March 2020 in order to protect tribal members in the early days of the COVID-19 pandemic.

According to the Havasupai Tourism Office, no new reservations for the Havasu Falls dates canceled through 2022.

Those with previously canceled reservations will be booked on their original dates. People who don't want the new dates can sell their reservations on a transfer list at havasupaireservations.com.

Available reservations will be posted at 8 a.m. Mountain Standard Time each day.

Tags

KNAU and Arizona NewsHavasupai TribeHavasupai FallsCOVID-19Local NewsTourism

KNAU STAFF

See stories by KNAU STAFF

NPR News and Talk
BBC World Service

KNAU Local News Now

KNAU's daily local news podcast

LISTEN NOW

NPR News and Talk
BBC World Service

| Sat                                                                               | Sun                                                                               | Mon                                                                               | Tue                                                                                | Wed                                                                                 |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
|  |  |  |  |  |
| 74°                                                                               | 69°                                                                               | 61°                                                                               | 61°                                                                                | 68°                                                                                 |
| 45°                                                                               | 45°                                                                               | 44°                                                                               | 40°                                                                                | 39°                                                                                 |

Northern Arizona Weather

The calm before the storm tomorrow, expect a mostly sunny, warm Saturday afternoon. Clouds will be on the increase Sunday as Hurricane Polo churns off of Baja, being drawn northward by a fall storm off of California. Sunday night into Tuesday looks to be a very wet setup for the region as remnant tropical moisture delivers soaking rain, stay tuned.

NPR News and Talk
BBC World Service

Current Thank You Gifts

View our Current Membership Thank You Gifts

Comments for this thread are now closed

0 Comments

1 Login ▼

Share

Best

Newest

Oldest

This discussion has been closed.

Subscribe

Privacy

Do Not Sell My Data

Knau

NPR News and Talk
BBC World Service

© 2026 KNAU Arizona Public Radio

Privacy Policy

Public Files

Employment

Compliance

Diversity

NPR News and Talk
BBC World Service